Founded under the auspices of the Harry G. C. Packard Collection Charitable Trust, the Metropolitan Center for Far Eastern Art Studies provides grants for Japanese and non-Japanese scholars of the arts of East Asia at advanced levels of achievement. Grants to non-Japanese scholars cover the categories listed below, with examples of typical projects.

Advanced Research and Publication by Individual Scholars

- Travel costs
- Acquisition of photographs and other materials

Institutional Projects

- Meetings and symposia
- Production costs associated with scholarly publications

Purchase of Library Materials

Dissertation Research

- Overseas travel and research for graduate students. Students must complete all requirements for the PhD except the dissertation by March 1 prior to the grant period.

General Guidelines

Metropolitan Center grants are ordinarily intended as seed money for new projects or as supplements to other income. As the Center rarely provides full support of large-scale activities, applicants are urged to seek funding from other agencies as well. Grants to doctoral candidates ordinarily supplement other sources to a maximum (from all sources) of $22,000 for a single student, $27,000 for a couple.

For application forms and detailed instructions, visit our website: www.metcenter-grants.net, or contact Maiko Behr, Administrator, Non-Japanese Grant Award Program, at: info@metcenter-grants.net.

Applications must be submitted by secure electronic upload by 11:59 pm, December 31, 2023, Japan Standard Time.

Awards will be announced by April 15, and funds available after June 1.
